WORLD HEALTH ORGANIZATION
REGIONAL COMMITTEE FOR EUROPE
SIXTIETH SESSION

Moscow, Russian Federation
13–16 September 2010

Guide for participants
Moscow

Moscow is one of the most beautiful cities in the Russian Federation, and plays an important role in the country’s industrial, scientific and cultural life. Some of Moscow’s museums are known throughout the world: the Tretyakov Gallery, with its magnificent collection of Russian fine art, the State Historical Museum, the Pushkin Museum of Fine Arts, and many more.

Moscow’s outstanding features are its radial ring urban design, laid out at the end of the sixteenth century, and its landscape with rolling hills and the sharp curves of the Moskva river. The Kremlin, the Arbat quarter, Novodevichy Convent, Poklonnaya Hill, Red Square: Moscow has preserved a multitude of historic and architectural monuments.

Moscow’s inhabitants fondly call their town “golden-domed Moscow”. This is the perfect name for a city where so many majestic churches and cathedrals have been built over the centuries. Many of the places of worship are so unique that the experts speak of “Moscow church architecture”, a particular style that was, to a great extent, defined the development of church building in Russia. Moscow’s most famous places of worship include St Basil’s Cathedral and the restored Cathedral of Christ the Saviour.

Moscow has always played a central role in Russia’s history. It was first mentioned in the chronicles in 1147 and, by the first half of the thirteenth century, had become the centre of an independent appanage principality; by the end of the fifteenth century, it was the capital of the developing unified Russian state. Moscow gradually became one of the largest cities in Europe and one of the most important centres in Russia: it was here that the first Russian book was printed, the first Russian theatre established and the first Russian newspaper published.

Moscow has lived through many experiences. It has united the forces of the Russian people in the fight against foreign invaders: first, the Tatar Mongol hordes, under whose yoke the Russian lands suffered for more than two and a half centuries; in 1612, the Polish-Lithuanian interventionists; and in 1812, Napoleon’s army. Two thirds of all the city’s buildings were destroyed in the fire that raged after Napoleon’s invasion. When the Russian troops freed Moscow, huge effort was needed to resurrect the broken city.

Napoleon was the last foreign invader to take Moscow. In the winter of 1941, when Hitler’s troops came to the very gates of the capital, the Russian command put all its force into preventing the enemy from entering the city. In the bloody combat that ensued, the German army suffered its first major defeat of the Second World War. The enemy was repelled from the walls of the capital, and Moscow was honoured with the name of “Hero City”.

Today still, Moscow plays a decisive role in the country’s life. It is the seat of Russia’s government, headed by the President, where important decisions are taken on the country’s future. Moscow, with its history and its inimitable charm, has become the symbol of the Russian Federation.
Contemporary Moscow has a unique architectural landscape, ancient churches alongside modern buildings, winding old alleys meeting broad boulevards. Despite some fundamental changes, Moscow remains an intrinsically captivating ancient town, feted in verse and song, enticing travellers, delighting its contemporaries.

Transport in connection with the social events will also be organized. Please check the timetable that will be displayed in the lobby of your hotel and at the Holiday Inn.
Visas

Most foreign nationals require an entry visa to travel to the Russian Federation. Please contact your nearest Russian consulate in good time for further information.

The procedure for obtaining a visa for the Regional Committee session is as follows:

- the form appended as Annex 2 should be completed and sent to the WHO Regional Office for Europe (fax: +45 39 17 18 18; e-mail: rc@euro.who.int);
- the request will be submitted to the Russian authorities;
- an authorization number will be issued and forwarded to you;
- the visa may be collected at your nearest Russian Embassy/Consulate by quoting the authorization number and date of issue, and submitting the completed visa application form and two recent passport photos. When collecting the visa, the official invitation is not needed, provided you have the visa authorization reference number.

There will be a fee, which is payable to the embassy/consulate either on submission of the completed form or at the time of visa issue. The amount to be charged will be given on the website of the embassy/consulate.

Please note that it takes at least 7 working days from receipt of the application by the authorities in the Russian Federation to process an application for a single entry visa, while processing an application for a multi-entry visa requires 14 working days. It is vital to submit a visa request well in advance, since time also needs to be allowed for collection of the visa at your local Russian Embassy/Consulate.

A list of embassies and consulates is given at http://www.mid.ru/zu_r.nsf/strawebeng.
